In my opinion the Series 3 of B&W Matrix 801 loudspeaker was mainly a cost cutting exercise done by B&W on the back of the Matrix 801 Series 2 model that was then marketed to us all as a set of improvements. That ' s a pretty bold statement and I can already hear lots of people out there screaming at me for saying this so let me try to back it up.

The Nautilus 801 is the latest version of B&W's longest-running franchise, the 801 loudspeaker, totally updated with design lessons learned from making the costly, visually striking Nautilus loudspeaker (see the sidebar, "The Inside Story"). The new speaker represents a substantial price increase over the 801 Series III, which retailed for $5500/pair, but B&W is quick to point out that the Nautilus 801 has been so totally redesigned that it would be fairer to compare the 801 Series III to ...

Since the introduction of the original B&W 801 monitor loudspeaker in 1980, it has been adopted as a reference by several recording studios around the world. Over the past five years, I have seen 801s present in just about every recording session with which I have been artistically involved. While the original 801 monitor had its strong points, I was never satisfied with the detached and muddy ...

Hello, I'm sorry to dig out this old thread but I have a quick question. I am looking for a pair of B&W speakers and could get matrix 801 s2 or 802 s3 for about the same price. The room is 25m2. Not very big and I listen mostly quiet. I do 80% mixing and 20% mastering (but more and more mastering jobs come is so I had the idea of getting b&w's).

B&W 801 nautilus VS. B&W 801D (new line) Hey guys, From my understanding, there are two main types of 801s. The 801 nautilus, which is 3-6 years old, and the 801D, which is from the new line that was introduced. My question to you guys are: 1) what is main difference between the two? 2) which one is better?
